Stay safe when saving on energy bills

West Sussex Fire & Rescue Service have attended several incidents caused by candles.

People are turning off their lights and central heating and moving over to using alternative methods to save money. However, the lighting of candles can pose significant fire safety risks and have devastating consequences if used incorrectly.

When using candles always keep the naked flame away from flammable materials, use a proper holder to keep candles upright and ensure they are placed on a heat resistant surface.

There are a number of fire safety best practices you can undertake which will likely help reduce your energy bills too. These include:

- Not leaving electrical appliances on standby.
- Unplugging items as soon as they've charged and when they're not in use.
- Making sure that any open fires have fire guards.
- Getting your chimneys swept regularly.

Smoke alarms are always the best line of defence for fire protection and they're absolutely vital if you're making use of cheap rate off-peak electricity. We understand this is a difficult time for many and we encourage people to keep themselves safe by always following our safety advice.
